There are numerous people, probably a majority, who believe that YaH has no physical form. I am going to keep this short and sweet based on what we can gather from the Turah (Law), which is actually only very few references. Sh'moot (Ex.) 24:10 is an important text for you all to look at. It clearly shows that they at least saw the feet and pavement of YaH. I mean, unless one has a hard time accepting that truth or doesn't want to accept the literal phrase used of the "rag'layu" being "His foot." Mainstream sheeple have falsely been taught to believe that YaH has no physical form. We are made in the physical image (tsalam) and likeness (damut) of YaH (B'rasheet (Gen.) 1:26). If that is not a physical thing, then Scripture need not have used such literal and picturesque terms in Aibreet (Hebrew). Those who are familiar with this literal language would see this very easily, unless their understanding of such terms has already been befuddled by modern Judaism, Christianity and the likes.
